Two Government Witnesses

Arrested At Portland.

Climax In The Plumer Alleged Bribery Hearing On Monday.

One Resisted, But The Other Went Along Peaceably Enough.

Portland, Me., June 9.—The climax in the Plumer alleged bribery hearing was reached today, when the judge found probable cause made out by the case of the government and at the same time ordered the arrest of Frank D. Ford and Michael J. Callahan, two of the principal witnesses for the prosecution, on the charge of conspiracy. Callahan went along peaceably, but Ford resisted, wanting to furnish bail on the spot. A scuffle ensued in the county court room. Ford was removed to the corridors, however, and there furnished bail. The two men were arrested in the court room, where they were sitting as spectators. Later in the afternoon, William Farrell, another government witness, was also arrested, on the same charge. A warrant was also made out for the arrest of John J. Peeney. Up to a late hour tonight, he had not been found. Plumer resigned as sheriff, as soon as the judge rendered his decision.

TO BE SENTENCED SATURDAY.

Salem, June 9.—John C. Best, the convicted slayer of George E. Bailey of North Saugus, is to be sentenced to death next Saturday. This announcement was made today by District Attorney Peters. Best will be brought into the superior court at 9.30 in the forenoon, and after the usual formalities will be sentenced to die in the electric chair at the state prison in Charlestown. After next Saturday's proceedings it is understood Best's counsel will ask the governor to commute the sentence to one of life imprisonment. About the only request made by the condemned man is that he be allowed to see his father, Thomas E. Best, of Middle Sackville, N. B., before he dies.

PASSED THE BILL.

Washington, June 9.—The house today passed the bill to protect the president, vice-president, members of the cabinet, foreign ministers and ambassadors, and to suppress the teachings of anarchy, by the vote of 175 to 38.

In The Senate.

Washington, June 9.—The principal speech in the senate today was on the Isthmian canal, by Senator Harris of Kansas, in favor of the Nicaragua route.

HE THREW THE BULL.

Laredo, Texas, June 9.—A bull fight was given in the Plaza de Toros of Neuva, Mexico, yesterday, the unique feature of which was the successful performance of Romulus, the famous Mexican wrestler, who succeeded in throwing a wild bull. Romulus grappled the bull and threw him at the first attempt. One bull was killed but no horses were hurt in this fight.

OUTBREAK FRUSTRATED.

Salem, Ore., June 9.—A mutiny occurred in the state penitentiary this morning and there was a wholesale attempt by convicts to escape. Guard Tiffany was killed and Frank Ferrell, another guard was wounded. Citizens have flocked to the assistance of the authorities and the outbreak will be frustrated.

2500 RIFLES SURRENDER.

London, June 9.—Lord Kitchener in a dispatch from Pretoria under today's date announced the surrender on Saturday and Sunday of 2500 rifles, of which 448 were handed in by Cape Colony rebels. The remainder were principally from General De Wet's men. The British commander adds that the cheers given by the Boers for King Edward were hearty.

PRINCETON'S PRESIDENT.

Princeton, N. J., June 9.—Woodrow Wilson, head of the department of politics, was today elected president of Princeton university, in place of Dr. Francis L. Patten, resigned.

RELATIONS STRAINED.

Bloomfontein, June 9.—A strong contrast to the good feeling between Boer and Briton is the bitterness existing between the burghers who are surrendering under the peace terms and those Boers who surrendered during the campaign. When the Boer leaders came to Bloemfontein, previous to the conclusion of peace, they curtly refused to shake hand with those who had previously surrendered. The general belief is that relations between these two classes of Boers will be embittered for a long time.

CASTAWAYS' TIMELY RESCUE.

Schooner From the Grand Banks Reports Terrible Story of Suffering of Two Lost Fishermen.

Gloucester, Mass., June 9.—A story of suffering and privation is told by Captain Van Amberg of the schooner Elector, which arrived at this port today from the Grand Banks. On May 29, when about fifty miles south of Scattered, the Elector picked up a dory containing two men, which had been adrift four days from the French fishing schooner L. C., from St. Pierre, Miquillon. The occupants of the dory presented a dread picture of the effects of starvation. They were found reclining in the bottom of the dory, emaciated and partly unconscious. Captain Van Amberg thinks that the fishermen would have been dead within a few hours if assistance had not arrived. The castaways were immediately taken on board the Elector and given careful treatment. They will be sent to St. Pierre by the French consul.

"THE SHOOTING STAR."

Starr, the Shooting Star, is the latest illustration of man's ingenuity in inventing means by which they may risk their necks for the entertainment of their fellow men. This intrepid athlete rides on an ordinary bicycle down a triple extension ladder which reaches from the top of the huge tent that covers the arena of the great Adam Forepaugh and Sells Brothers. Enormous Shows United to the ground. He comes literally shooting, and the slightest swerve from his narrow path, which is the rungs of a ladder ten inches apart, might put a sudden end to one startling feat. At the least, this far he has not met with a mishap, and he certainly does provide a few seconds of hair-raising diversion. He will be here with the great shows when they exhibit on South Road, Monday, June 23.

RETURNS FROM EUROPE.

James Fosburgh, the younger son of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Fosburgh, who has been in England for the past two years with his uncle, has returned to his home in this city. Young Fosburgh's uncle, Contractor Steward, became noted during the past year in London for the erection of the mammoth power plant there in eleven months, when not a single English firm would take it under five years. He has now become the greatest contractor in London, as he was in this country when he left. The young man will be with his father and brother at the White Mountain Paper company's plant this summer.

DEATH HORROR IN CHICAGO FIRE.

Ten Dead And Thirty Seriously Injured.

Patients In Strait Jackets And Manacles Prey Of Flames.

Terrible Scenes Witnessed At The Windows By Firemen And Spectators.

Chicago, June 9.—Nine men and one woman were killed and about thirty persons were injured in a fire, which this afternoon destroyed the sanitarium conducted by St. Luke's society, at the corner of Wabash avenue and Twenty-first street. The society occupied the building which was long known as Hotel Woodruff, and for a brief period as Hotel Lancaster.

By far the greater portion of the patients received in the institution were those seeking cure from the drink habit, and those who were addicted to the use of drugs. When the fire broke out there was on the first floor a number of patients suffering from delirium tremens and some who were deranged by drugs. Several of these were strapped to their beds and it was found impossible to save them, so rapidly did the fire spread through the building.

As the cry of fire rang through the building, patients sprang from their beds, and before they could be prevented, several had jumped from the windows to the pavement. The fire department was on the scene within a few minutes, and as the windows were filled with people shrieking for help, the firemen devoted their first efforts to save lives. While this was the means of saving a large number of people who were carried down the ladders by the firemen, it gave the fire such a headway that there was almost no chance for those on the upper floors of the building to make their escape, and such of them as were not suffocated, were killed or badly injured by leaping from the windows.

Alderman Kent was in a room on the fifth floor with his attendant, A. W. Wattle. The attendant, who has been totally blind for many years, was in a straight jacket and his hands were manacled to a belt that passed around his waist. When the alarm of fire was sounded, Wattle ran to investigate. He found the elevator shaft a mass of flames and ran back to help the attendant, who was shouting like an insane person. He had groped his way to the door and by the time his attendant had reached him, had fallen, overcome with smoke. Wattle tried to drag him down the hall to a place of safety, but Kent had become so crazed that it was almost impossible to do anything with him.

Wattle was finally compelled to ign for his life, as the flames were already scorching his clothing. He ran to a window across which were iron bars, managed to tear two of these from their fastenings and two other men who had followed him, climb out on the sill with him. They were seen by the firemen, a ladder was run up and the three men were taken down. Wattle became crazed with excitement and sprang for a net which some men were holding on the sidewalk, and sustained injuries which probably will cause his death.

Kent, who died of suffocation, three hours after the outbreak of the fire, his body was found, one leg burned to a crisp, and the head burned off.

A scene that wrought to the pitch of madness was enacted at a fourth story window on the north side. Across this window was a heavy wire screen, and on the outside of the screen were iron bars. Behind the bars were gathered a crowd of men numbering between twenty-five and thirty. Escape in other directions was impossible, and the one chance for life lay through that barred window. The men closest to the screen tore and tugged at it in a vain effort to tear it from its fastenings and the men behind them fought madly to get close enough to the screen to fasten their fingers in it. So fiercely did the prisoners pull at the screen that many streams of blood trickled from lacerated fingers and hands and flowed over the window sills. A number of the men at the window were in straight jackets and manacles, and those not being able to hold themselves or others were wild in their frantic efforts to break through the bars.

The crowd in the street watching the scene of commands at the men and gave orders to the firemen who were doing all that men could do to get through the bars from the outside. As the flames came steadily toward the men the people in the street screamed in helpless rage. It seemed as though all of the men would die within six inches of freedom.

That any of the men escaped at all is owing to the work of W. E. Davis of Cedar Rapids, Ia., a patient in the

NEW SPUR TRACK.

Cars Now Unload Their Cargo on the Site of the New Paper Mill.

A spur track has been built from the main line of the Portsmouth and Dover railroad to the site of the new plant of the White Mountain Paper company, now in course of construction at Freeman's Point.

The spur almost completely encircles the company's property, curving around the water front, and running down to the wharves at the apex of the point. Cars loaded with material for the mills will run in from the direction of Dover.

On Monday about a dozen freight cars were sidetracked on the White Mountain company's property, unloading brick, lumber and other material for building purposes.

Work will soon begin on the actual work of construction. The large mill will be built in three sections and its total length will be one thousand feet.

It is intended to begin work on the middle section of the mill first and this section will be made ready for occupancy as soon as possible. Manager Morgan wishes to begin the making of paper at the earliest possible date, and the building of the mill in sections will enable him to begin to manufacture much sooner than would be possible if it were planned to begin operations in every portion of the immense building at the same time.

The scene at Freeman's Point is a busy one. Upwards of eight hundred men are at work, and additions are being made to the force daily.

The proportion of skilled labor is much greater now than it was a month ago, and as the summer advances the number of skilled workmen who will be given employment will be still further increased. The work of grading and excavating is progressing much more rapidly than would have been thought possible, and the Point looks very little now as it did a year, or even three months ago.

Portsmouth is the Mecca at the present time of men from all parts of New England looking for work, and few applications receive unfavorable replies.

GOOD FISH STORY.

A Freeman citizen, whose veracity is unquestioned, tells of a catch of pickerel he made last spring. A brook runs through his farm and early in the spring he strung a barbed wire fence along its shores. This brook was very susceptible to the rains and would rise rapidly at times. Just before one of the rains, he said, he put bait upon the barbs and waited for the brook to rise. When the water went down he went down to the wire and found 365 pickerel hung up on the fence for him. A good story as that ought to have reached the papers before June.—Kennebec Journal.

Hardy gurdjes, hand organs, German bands, street orchestras, wandering minstrels and hobo violin players.—Portsmouth is certainly having enough music this spring, but no quality, and to relate, hardly equals the quantity.

AN ENGLISH CURATE TELLS WHY HE TURNED ACTOR.

He Couldn't Make $1,000 a Year as a Preacher, and the Struggle to Maintain a Family and an Appearance on His Small Stipend Was Too Great to Bear.

The union between the church and the stage has been strengthened by a clerk in holy orders becoming an actor, the first instance on record.

The gentleman in question is Mr. Leighton Leigh. He assured a Mail representative that he very strongly objects to be told he has "forsaken" the church for the stage. The severance of his connection with the establishment was not voluntary, but compulsory. His orders are still retained, which is not the case if an ordained priest deliberately quits the church of his own accord.

Mr. Leigh, according to his own statement, was driven out of the church by the struggle to make a decent appearance and keep up a position in the parish on an absurdly insufficient stipend.

"About 14 years ago," said Mr. Leigh, "I was ordained to the curacy of Horfield, Bristol, where I was assistant chaplain to the barracks, and remained there two years. Before I definitely decided on a clerical career, however, I had successfully tried the callings of auctioneer's clerk, tea merchant and schoolmaster. I was also private tutor for a short time before finally entering the Gloucester Theological college to read for orders. Being ordained, I threw my whole heart into my work and endeavored to forget the old love for the stage which had been with me since childhood."

"Did you ever, previous to taking orders, endeavor to get upon the stage?"

"Once only," was the reply, "and then I was actually offered an engagement, and, marvelous to relate, my heart failed me, and I refused it. I was 17 at the time, and I had the confidence to apply to Henry Irving (as he was then) for an engagement. He sent me to Mr. Blackmore, the agent, who procured me the offer of a part in Clarence Holte's 'New Babylon' company. However, as I say, my courage failed me, and I let the chance go by."

"After staying at Horfield for two years I became successively senior curate of Hammersmith parish church, curate in charge at Barley, Herts; senior curate of Chesham, Herts, the vicar being chaplain to Lord Salisbury; senior curate of Hitchin, Herts; senior curate of Brondesbury, N. W., and finally locum tenens at Hatfield, which position I held for nine months. I have married, baptized and buried hundreds of people and preached to many thousands. It was not from choice, but from sheer necessity, that I gave up my clerical work. I was suddenly and unexpectedly deprived of the private income I had hitherto enjoyed, being at the time in receipt of a net salary of £140 a year."

"This is the average salary of a curate in the church of England, and thus gives a man 23 1/2 lbs. a week to maintain as a gentleman one of the most prominent and important positions in a parish. I had a wife and four children, and I say that of this sum a man cannot keep himself and family, pay rent and taxes, to say nothing of the expenses of children's education, the little parochial subscriptions that are always cropping up and the occasional dues while visiting the poor of the parish. It cannot be done. The life of a father of a family under such conditions is a burden which he cannot support with success."

"On discovering that I was in the predicament I mentioned I wrote to a bishop in whose diocese I had worked for eight years, but to no practical avail. Of course his lordship's letter was kind and courteous, but he found it impossible to offer me a living. I found out, too, that most of the so-called 'good livings' in England require an incumbent with large private means. All the men under whom I have worked have been rich men, whose positions cost them far more than their livings produced."

"At the time of which I speak I summed £200 a year—not an extravagant sum—and for some time I applied for numerous chaplaincies and appointments and answered advertisement after advertisement. The reply was always the same: 'Are you a married man and have you any private means?' After my answer to the effect that I had a wife and four children, but no private means, the correspondence ceased. Matters became worse and worse. Debt and difficulty encompassed me on every side, and when things were at their gloomiest I met Mr. F. A. Seandmore, who had been a fellow passenger with me on a trip to Norway some years before. On that occasion I had told him of my early longings for the stage, and when he learned that those aspirations still existed he offered me an engagement in his touring company. I jumped at it—who would not under such circumstances—and left the church."—London Mail.

Bells in Jerusalem.

Turks and Jews as well as Christians, according to the Kolnische Volkszeitung, have been much excited by the sound of the three bells of the new Protestant church in Jerusalem. For several centuries the use of bells by the Christians in Palestine or elsewhere within the Ottoman empire had been prohibited by the great Turk, who has prohibited it now, however, to his friend and ally, the evangelical German kaiser.

In the Theatre de la Turque, published in 1688, it is said: "The Turks hate bells as a symbol of Christianity and do not permit even the Christians to use them. Only in a few remote mountain convents or in lonely islands where there are no resident Mohammedans is the use of a bell tolerated."—Westminster Gazette.

THE LAMBTON WORM.

A Curious English Tradition That Reads Like a Fairy Tale.

The park and manor house of Lambton, belonging to the family of that name, the head of which is the Earl of Durham, lie on the bank of the river Wear to the north of Lunley. Early in the fourteenth century the heir, young John Lambton, was leading a dissolute life. Among his delinquencies was the custom of fishing on Sunday, and on one of these occasions, finding that his usual good fortune had deserted him, he gave way to temper and invoked curses upon the river, the land, the fish, himself, his luck and all that concerned him. Then he invoked the powers of evil to give him aid and success in one last cast of the rod. A great strain came upon the line, and, after a tremendous effort, he landed an immense and hideous-looking worm, resembling an eel. This, in disgust, he threw into a well close by, where it grew with such marvellous rapidity as soon to fill it up with its body and limbs, and consequently it was able to scramble out. Then it made for a large rock in the center of the river, and, coiling its tail around it, made it its headquarters by day, while at night it encircled a hill at a little distance from the river on the opposite bank. These are called respectively Wormwell and Wormhill to this day, and the latter is about a mile from Lambton Hall. From these, its coils of vantage, it would raid the country round, sucking forays among the farmsteads, mucking the cows, worrying the cattle, eating the lambs and smaller fry, frightening men, women and children and causing them to flee in terror for their lives. Thus it laid waste all the countryside, and soon reached the castle itself, where dwelt the old lord in solitary and gloomy grandeur, the hopeful heir having joined the Crusaders and set out for Palestine.

Advised by his steward, the lord of Lambton placed troughs of milk in the way by which the worm must approach to propitiate it. But in time the milk of the region gave out, and the worm, to signify its anger, rooted up trees and took to destroying every living thing. The knight errant of the period sought to make away with this terrible monster, but one and all perished who made the attempt. The worm would envelop them in its tremendous folds and crush them to death, or should the knight succeed in dealing what would be thought a fatal blow or thrust the worm had the power of reuniting the severed parts and becoming whole again.

At length, after seven years' absence, John Lambton returned home, now a knight of Rhodes. Acting on the advice of a venerable squire whom he consulted, he caused his armor to be studded with lance points, engaged to go to the river at early morning armed only with his sword and, taking his stand upon the summit of the worm rock, await the coming of the monster. Further, he made a vow that if successful in his enterprise he would slay the first living being that he might chance to meet on his return from the encounter, and that should he fail to perform his oath precisely as prescribed it was decreed that no lord of Lambton for nine successive generations should die a natural death or in his bed. The result of the combat between the knight and the dragon was decisive in favor of the former, who slew his enemy by embarking in and piercing it with the spearheads in many places, and then, having cut the body in twain, let fall the lower portion into the stream first, the upper portion being held upon the spear points until the possibility of reuniting had passed. But when, in answer to the blast on his horn announcing victory, the old lord came out to greet him, the oath had to be broken, since filial piety would not allow of its fulfillment. During the period of the curse no lord of Lambton did die a natural death. The last of the nine generations, Henry Lambton, M. P. for Durham in 1761, died while crossing the new bridge over the Wear in his carriage. His predecessors had all undergone the same. Genealogical Magazine.

Jewels.

An old book written by Camillus Leonardus tells much of interest about jewels and names a number of stones that either are no longer found or else were creations of the author's imagination. This is most probable when we read Leonardus' description of the alcoria, which, he says, not alone renders a man invisible, but "being held in the mouth, allays thirst." The alcoria, he further states, is to be found only in the intestines of a capon that has lived seven years. "When the stone has become perfect," to quote this authority, "the capon does not drink." However, it is never larger than a large bean. Again, he tells of the bozoor, a "red, dusty, brittle and light stone," which is taken from the body of some animal and is infallible against melancholy. He credits Queen Elizabeth with wearing a bozoor, and Charles V. had four of them. The four rings, however, of most historical interest were those presented by Pope Innocent to King John. The monarch was urged to note with extreme care the shape of the rings, their number, color and matter. The number 4, being a square, typified firmness of mind, fixed steadfastly on the four cardinal virtues. The blue color of the sapphire denoted faith, the green of the emerald hope, the crimson of the ruby charity and the splendor of the topaz good works. The rings themselves represented eternity, with neither beginning nor end. Gold, which was the matter, and, according to Solomon, the most precious of metals, signified wisdom, more to be desired than riches and power.—Chicago Record.

REASONS WHY M'WILLIAMS DECIDED TO FOREGO THE DAINTY.

It was the Special Feature of a Banquet Got Up to Entertain His Guests, but He Could See the Kitchen From a Window of His Room.

When a man has enthusiastically planned a hunting trip in the Rockies, inviting friends from London and Paris, and a slight mishap at the beginning threatens to spoil everything, he may be excused for adopting desperate measures. That was the position of McWilliams from New York. A mountain fished had delayed his party at a half way house among the foothills of the Rockies. Lord So-and-so, considering himself a great hunter and a grizzly, seemed to think the elements had conspired against his own august personage. The German curate, by asking questions that took all edge from the German's stories of prowess in the chase, increased the general irritation. Mutterings about "colonial savagery"

APPROPRIATION BILL.

It Is Giving The Common Council Heaps Of Trouble.

Its Whereabouts Discussed At Special Meeting On Monday Evening.

"Where's Mine?" Asks Clark—"Yes, And Mine?" Echoes McCarthy; While Mystery Hovers Over.

The common council held a special meeting on Monday evening, at the call of the mayor, for the purpose of considering the annual appropriation bill. The appropriation bill was not considered, however, neither was anything else, although Councilmen Pickering and Clark indulged in some highly diverting verbal pyrotechnics.

The meeting was called to order in proper form, Councilmen Britton, Scott and Hanseam being absent. The records of the last regular meeting were read by the clerk and approved by the president, and the latter gentleman stated the business which was to come before the meeting.

Councilman Tucker expressed his contempt for appropriation bills, all and sundry, by a motion to adjourn. On a ye and nay vote seven councilmen were found to share Mr. Tucker's contempt, and several more appeared to consider the appropriation bill of some little importance. President Goodall sided with the latter faction, and the motion to adjourn was lost.

The council chamber presented a very free and easy aspect. Several of the gentlemen were smoking, and some others were talking and laughing among themselves in a manner which disconcerted the more serious minded to a considerable extent. A ping-pong table would have added considerably to the general festivity, but lacking this method of amusement, the councilmen diverted themselves to the best of their ability with the means provided.

Councilman Clark opened the evening's entertainment with a simple motion to the effect that the council begin the consideration of the appropriation bill.

Councilman Pickering, chairman of the council committee on bills on second reading, said that his committee was not ready to report on the appropriation bill. He said that he understood at the last meeting of the council, that his committee was ordered to report on this measure at the next regular meeting, to be held in two weeks, and that he had not attempted to get the committee together to prepare a report to be rendered in three days. He went on to say that he met the mayor on the street, on Monday afternoon, and that the city's executive head had threatened to show up the council committee before the public, in case the report on the appropriation bill was not rendered at the present meeting.

The mayor did not ask Councilman Pickering if his committee was ready to report on such short notice, but the gentleman was ready to accept any responsibility which might be entailed, as the fault, if fault there were, was his. He had not called the members of the committee together, and they could not be blamed in any way, Mr. Pickering could not see, however, that anyone should be blamed, as he had not expected a meeting at so early a date.

Councilman Clark was on his feet immediately after Mr. Pickering concluded his remarks, and having been recognized by the chair, proceeded to give his views of the case.

"With all respect to the gentleman who has just spoken," said Mr. Clark, "I must insist that in my opinion the gentleman and the members of the committee of which he is chairman have been guilty of negligence. When any bill is referred to any committee, it is that committee's duty to prepare a report at the earliest possible moment, and it is not exactly the proper thing to place bills in a safe, secured by a time lock, where it is impossible to get at them, until the expiration of a certain time.

"I consider that the chairman of the committee on bills on second reading has been guilty of improper conduct, and for my part I am highly indignant at the treatment which this body has received at the hands of Councilman Pickering."

At this point President Goodall interrupted the speaker to inform him that it was not proper to indulge in personalities in meetings of parliamentary bodies.

The rebuke embarrassed Mr. Clark slightly, but he soon recovered himself, and spoke somewhat heatedly of the bill on the $200,000 bond issue, which had been in the hands of the committee for several weeks, and on which no report and no request for further time had been made.

This latter was evidently intended to be a knock-out blow, but Mr. Pickering came up smiling, and countered most effectively.

"In regard to this bond issue bill," said the chairman of the much criticized committee, "we should certainly have asked for further time for its proper consideration two meetings ago, but it not been for circumstances entirely beyond our control. At that particular meeting I remember that a few of us sat in this chamber for a long time waiting patiently for a sufficient number of members of this body to put in their appearance to make up a quorum. During this time eight or ten councilmen were closeted in the smallest room in the city building enclosed in some highly important matters, and business was so good in this particular room, that when the delinquent gentlemen did finally appear, they rushed through a motion to adjourn after one or two preliminary votes had been taken, and before I had an opportunity to ask for further time on behalf of my committee. The same course was pursued at the last meeting, and the council adjourned leaving business on the table which should have been disposed of weeks ago."

Councilman Clark made no reply to Mr. Pickering's remarks, but he was anxious to know if the board had not the right to demand the appropriation bill at that time. The bill had been taken out of the hands of the committee at the last meeting, he said, and the council had directed them to produce the bill at the next meeting. He thought that it was the duty of the presiding officer to enforce the demand that the bill be produced.

Councilman Pickering said in reply that the rules of order gave a committee a reasonable time to produce a bill after it was taken out of their hands. The committee was not directed to report at this particular meeting. They were required to render a report at the next regular meeting of the council, and neither he nor any other gentleman, unless it might be spoken had any knowledge of the mayor's intention of calling a special meeting, until last Saturday.

Mr. Clark suggested that the president of the committee on bills on second reading be given an opportunity to call the members of the committee together and be given a time to prepare a report. "I do not wish to be unreasonable," he said, "neither do I wish to be imposed upon."

Councilman Newman, a member of the committee whose methods were being so freely criticised, secured the attention of the chair, and said that he understood that the committee was allowed two weeks in which to prepare its report, and he could not see the justice of demanding the report in three days.

Councilman Clark then informed the assembled councilmen that Mr. Pickering and his associates were evidently talking about an appropriation bill presented at the last meeting, whereas his remarks had reference to a bill introduced by himself two weeks before. He reminded the gentlemen present that the committee had not been able to produce the original bill at the last meeting, and that an alleged copy presented by the chairman of the committee had been declared illegal by the city solicitor and Councilman McCarthy had introduced a new bill, and the first bill had been taken out of the committee's hands.

"I care nothing for the last bill," he concluded. "What I want to know is, what has become of the first bill?"

The records of the council's previous meetings were read and it was found that the committee had been directed to report at the next meeting.

"On which bill were they directed to report?" asked Mr. Clark. The records were again read and it appeared that Councilman McCarthy's bill was the one on which a report had been required. The clerk had no record that the first bill had been taken out of the hands of the committee.

"Then there are two appropriation bills before the council," said Mr. Clark.

The president was of the opinion that Mr. Clark was correct.

"I insist upon the production of the first bill," said its author.

Mr. Newman rose to his feet once more and made a few remarks the substance of which was that he would like to know what the gentlemen were talking about.

The few spectators of the proceedings certainly shared Mr. Newman's perplexity.

Messrs. Clark and Pickering attempted to explain the situation, but their explanations only added to the complexity of the matter. It was perfectly clear, however, that Mr. Clark was anxious to know what had become of his appropriation bill, and it was equally clear that both appropriation bills were just as deep in the mire as they were at the beginning of the session.

President Goodall rose to his feet at this point and attempted to explain matters. It appeared from his remarks that Councilman Clark introduced an appropriation bill at a meeting of the council held two weeks ago last Thursday. When the committee on bills on second reading was called upon at the last meeting to render a report on the bill, it was found that Mr. Pickering, the chairman of the committee, was not able to produce the original bill, but he presented what he claimed to be a perfect copy. City Solicitor Batchelder was called in and decided that action upon a copy of the bill would not be legal, and Councilman McCarthy introduced a second bill, and the committee had been ordered to report on this bill at the next meeting. President Goodall's explanation was a masterly one as far as it went, but it did not clear up the mystery surrounding Mr. Clark's bill.

Mr. Clark, understanding that the first bill had been taken out of the committee's hands, but he did not volunteer any information as to what had become of it.

There was some further discussion, and then Mr. Pickering quoted an opinion of Judge Edward H. Adams, in which that gentleman said that in case the committee was not ready to report at the present meeting, there was nothing for the meeting to do but to adjourn.

Councilman Newman asked if the first appropriation bill was dead, and President Goodall ruled that it was not, according to the records of the clerk.

Mr. Clark thought that it was very discourteous for Mr. Pickering to consult Mr. Adams, instead of referring the matter to the city solicitor. He spoke somewhat at length on this subject, and concluded his remarks by saying:

"If the committee on bills on second reading does not render a report at the next meeting, I shall prefer charges against the members of the committee. I have nothing but friendly feelings toward the gentlemen who compose this committee, and I shall regret the necessity of preferring charges, but if the report is not forthcoming when this body next comes together, I shall certainly do so. I have the paper in my pocket at the present time, but I shall withhold it for the present."

Councilman Pickering said that he had now been threatened by both the mayor and the councilmen from ward three, but that he proposed to do his duty as he saw it regardless of threats. Mr. Pickering's final remark was a motion to adjourn.

This time all the councilmen voted in favor of the motion, except Mr. Clark, and it was therefore carried.

POLICE COURT.

Blanche Clark, who lives on Hancock street, faced Judge Emery, charged with using offensive language to a neighbor, Mrs. Lindstrom.

Blanche pleaded not guilty to the charge, but the testimony of Mrs. Lindstrom, Annie Brassard, and of a lad named Harry Seales outweighed the testimony of Blanche herself, and the judge imposed a fine of $3, with added costs of $7.57.

Nora Coughlin was required to answer, to a charge of being drunk on Vaughan street, and despite her turbulent protestations, Judge Emery found her guilty and imposed a sentence of six months confinement at Brentwood, with costs of prosecution taxed at $7.57.

KILLING MOSQUITOS.

Old Orchard's scheme for killing off mosquitoes is working to the queen's taste. There was some delay at first to get the proper person to spread the petroleum on the ponds and marshes where the insects breed. During this time the mosquitoes got a little start and people there have been bothered a little, but the number of the insects is growing smaller every day, proving that the new plan works splendidly. The oil is used after each rainfall, though a barrel of the crude petroleum being necessary to make the rounds.

A PLEASANT AFFAIR.

Thomas S. Clark Tenders Reception To Coopers' Union.

Out Of Town Craftsmen And Prominent Citizens Also Present.

The Guests Enjoy An Elaborate Banquet And Are Entertained With Music And Speeches.

Thomas S. Clark, who has just completed his apprenticeship in the coopers' shop of the Frank Jones Brewing company, and become a full fledged member of the coopers' union, tendered a reception to his fellow craftsmen, in Grand Army hall, on Monday evening.

Several union men from Boston were present at the reception, and Messrs. Rowe, Harris, Parker and Caswell, and Mayor John Pender, were the guests of Mr. Clark.

The affair was strictly informal although several well-known members of the coopers' union were introduced to the assemblage and delivered short addresses. Mayor Pender also spoke to the gentlemen on the subject of unionism and its relation to civic improvement.

Entertainment was furnished by the musically inclined among the guests, including Rowe, Parker and Caswell, of the famous P. A. C. quartette, and Mr. Banks who sang several comic songs in a manner which, to use a well-worn expression, brought down the house.

A banquet was served at half past ten, consisting of cold meats, salads, strawberry short cake, crackers and cheese, assorted cakes and ice cream. Messrs. Cottrell and Walsh were the caterers and they maintained the enviable reputation which they have earned by their past efforts in catering to parties of this kind.

Mr. Clark was indefatigable in his efforts to make the event a memorable one. No courtesy which might add to the pleasure of the evening was forgotten, and no one who was favored with an invitation will be likely to forget the reception.

The speeches all had reference to the work and aims of the labor unions, and all of them emphasized the benefits of association and co-operation among workmen of all classes.

The assemblage did not break up until the wee sma' hours.

WALTER AT SECOND.

Although Walter Woods has not been pitching much of late, he figures in the score in about every game played by the Jersey City team, and he has been placed at the head of the batting list. On Monday he played at second base for his team, and although his hitting was not up to its usual standard, he put up a clever fielding game.

It is said that Walter's pitching arm is lame at the present time, but that it will probably be all right again in a few weeks and then he will prove as effective in the box as he was at the beginning of the season.

STRIKE IS ENDED.

Engineer Stebbins was seen at the Rockingham Light and Power company's building this morning by a Herald reporter.
